In collaboration with Lieutenant Governor Gavin Newsom, the Committee for Economic Development (CED) will be hosting a forum on its recent report, Boosting California's Postsecondary Education Performance. The report examines the condition of California's postsecondary education and addresses such issues including: major demographic shifts in school- and working-age Californians; state-based opportunities in education and training; projected shortages of workers with education and training beyond high school; and financial impediments for students and families.

Along with the Lieutenant Governor, the forum will include remarks from Lenny Mendonca, a CED Trustee and former Director of McKinsey & Company, followed by a panel discussion featuring leaders from California's business and education community.
