CED Fall Policy Conference

November 15-16, 2016 The Willard InterContinental, Washington, D.C.

Day 1: Tuesday, November 15th

Registration Opens – 11:30 am (Peacock Alley)

Luncheon: The Importance of Cultural Tourism and Hospitality on Economic Growth – 12:00 pm

Cultural Tourism is one of the tourism industry's most dynamic new developments. In conjunction with hospitality and creative industries, cultural tourism plays a significant – but often unrecognized – role in creating jobs, generating tax revenue, and attracting talent, among other economic benefits. But exactly how much value does creativity add to the economy, and what policies can be implemented to support the growth and development of creative industries?

Keynote Remarks:

• The Hon. Paul Tonko, United States Representative (D-NY)

Program Speakers:

- Jim Houser, Group President, Delaware North (Moderator)
- Geoff Bolan, CEO, Sustainable Travel International
- Shelby Coffey, Vice Chair, Newseum
- Lou Jacobs, Co-CEO, Delaware North
- Edna Johnson, Vice President, Communications & Brands, Michelin North America
- Laura Lott, President and CEO, American Alliance of Museums

Surmounting the Roadblocks to Quality, Affordable Care for America's Seniors – 1:45 pm

Our elected policymakers must safeguard the quality and affordability of health care for America's seniors. Mobilizing market forces and consumer choice among competing health care plans could drive those plans and their care providers to deliver quality care at prices that seniors and taxpayers can afford. This session will assess the proper role of market forces and competition, and will also consider the implications of reform for associated issues, such as access to innovations and expensive, but highly beneficial treatments and long-term care.

Keynote Remarks:

• The Hon. Joe Pitts, United States Representative (R-PA)

Program Speakers:

- Lori Montgomery, Deputy National Editor, The Washington Post (Moderator)
- Tom McInerney, President and CEO, Genworth
- Steve Messinger, President, ECG Management Consultants
- Robert Popovian, Senior Director, U.S. Government Relations, Pfizer
- Alice Rivlin, Senior Fellow of Economic Studies and Health Policy, The Brookings Institution; Founding Director, Congressional Budget Office

Women in Public and Private Leadership: Breaking Through the Glass Ceiling – 3:00 pm

While opportunities for women in both the public and private sectors have improved in recent decades, still only 20 percent of women serve in congress, and less than 20 percent serve on boards of major U.S. corporations. This session explores the role women play in elected office and in corporate leadership, and examines the necessary conditions for the advancement of women across all sectors.

Program Speakers:

- Patricia Davis-Muffett, Senior Leader, Global Public Sector Marketing, Amazon Web Services (Moderator)
- Kathleen Abernathy, Executive Vice President, External Affairs, Frontier Communications
- Carl Camden, President and CEO, Kelly Services
- Julianna Richter, COO, Edelman, U.S.
- Jane Stevenson, Global Leader for CEO Succession and Vice Chairman, Board & CEO Services, Korn Ferry

Serving the Underbanked: Expanding Access While Ensuring Fair and Safe Practices – 4:15 pm

The financial crisis has led to stricter rules and higher standards being put on financial institutions, designed to protect consumers from predatory lending practices. But limiting what lenders can charge customers can make them less willing to service to lower-income, higher-risk consumers. What are some policy developments and new business practices designed to strike a better balance between safe banking and accessible banking?

Keynote Remarks:

• The Hon. Marsha Blackburn, United States Representative (R-TN)

Program Speakers:

- Kelli Grant, Personal Finance and Consumer Spending Reporter, CNBC (Moderator)
- Jen Mishory, Executive Director, Young Invincibles
- Bob Stefanowski, CEO, DFC Global
- Susan Weinstock, Director, Office of Consumer Policy, U.S. Department of the Treasury

Reception - 5:30 pm

Leadership in the Nation's Interest Award Dinner – 6:30 pm

Honoree:

David Cordani, President and CEO, Cigna Corporation

Introducer:

• Kent J. Thiry, Chairman and CEO, DaVita Inc. CEO, DaVita Medical Group

•The Hon. Susan Davis, United States Representative (D-CA)

The Retirement Savings Deficit: Time to Panic? 8:30 am

The U.S. is facing a retirement savings crisis. Barely half of all working Americans have access to company-sponsored retirement programs, and if current trends continue, by 2050 25 million retirees will be poor or near-poor-nearly triple the number today. As aging generations approach retirement, this savings deficit portends falling living standards and a stressed federal budget. This session will examine solutions to secure the financial future of our retirees as well as assess the economic implications of the retirement savings deficit.

Keynote Remarks:

Ron Pressman, CEO, Institutional Financial Services, TIAA

Program Speakers

- Jeanne Sahadi, Senior Writer, CNN Money (Moderator)
- Teresa Ghilarducci, Professor of Economics, The New School for Social Research
- Constance Hunter, Chief Economist, KPMG

Importance of STEM Education: Why Does it Matter? – 10:00 am

In the decades ahead, the global economy will increasingly rely on technical and computational abilities of workers. How can we ensure individuals succeed in the 21st century marketplace? What skills must be promoted by executives and policymakers to close the talent gap and increase the competitiveness of American companies? Can STEM education prepare our nation's future talent? This session addresses the changing nature of work and the role of STEM.

Program Speakers:

- Mary Miller, Principal Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense for Research and Engineering, U.S. Department of Defense (Moderator)
- Gregg Fleisher, President, National Math and Science Initiative
- Michael Lach, Director, STEM Policy and Strategic Initiatives, University of Chicago
