CED Poll Shows Where CEOs Stand on Timely Issues, Including Russia, the Fed, and the Pandemic

New York, NY, March 15, 2022...As the war in Ukraine continues to escalate, a new survey of CEOs and Directors, released by the Committee for Economic Development, the public policy center of The Conference Board (CED), found that Russia is the top policy priority they want the President and Congress to address this year. As detailed in a new survey, Russia concerns superseded inflation and strengthening the economy, which follow closely behind.

The survey gauged more than 80 CEOs and Board Directors, more than 90 percent of whom are at companies with more than $1 billion in revenue. Respondents were asked a series of questions about timely issues including the COVID-19 pandemic, the war in Ukraine, and the Federal Reserve's stance on inflation.

More than two-thirds of the surveyed business leaders view Russia as the biggest policy priority for 2022; simultaneously, roughly 67 percent of respondents agree with the President's handling of the situation in Ukraine.

Closely related to the primacy of Russia on the list of concerns and the disruptions it is causing in the global and domestic economy, more than 80 percent of surveyed business leaders agree the Federal Reserve needs to move faster on inflation.

On the pandemic front, the vast majority of respondents—over 90 percent—believe the nation is ready to treat COVID-19 as an endemic virus. What's more, the results reveal mixed feelings from corporate America about the success of vaccination and testing mandates for companies with more than 100 employees: 38 percent said the mandates did not help nor hurt vaccination rates in the workplace, and only 7 percent said the vaccination mandates helped a great deal.

"Since the start of 2022, the nation has dealt with the Omicron wave of the pandemic, rising inflation, and now, war in Ukraine," noted Dr. Lori Esposito Murray, President of CED. "Despite the multitude of compounding crises, our data show CEOs and Directors are unified in several key areas—notably, the urgency of the war in Ukraine, and support for faster action on behalf of the Federal Reserve to address inflation. The President and Congress must take swift action to capitalize on this support to address these urgent concerns."

Key findings from the survey include:

FOREIGN POLICY: More than two-thirds of respondents see Russia as the top priority for the President and Congress to address in 2022.

- Business leaders view Russia, inflation, and strengthening the economy as the biggest priorities for the President and Congress to address this year.
- Of the policy priorities that should not be a major focus in 2022, respondents ranked a child tax credit and the trade deficit the lowest.
